1. ALIGNMENT

Reviewer: 1
Score: 2
Weighted Score: 0.4

Strengths: The English program teaches diverse courses, the department chair is a former President of the National Council of Teachers of English. Other faculty were also mentioned as being leaders in their field.

Weaknesses: Did not demonstrate how reducing the department would negatively influence the institution or how the department is well aligned with the institution's mission. Rather, the author suggests that UM should be aligned with the English department's mission.

Strengths:
- Course offerings and areas of inquiry align to areas of Diversity, Sustainability.
- English teaching program serves a great number of students in K-12 preparatory areas.

Weaknesses:
- Leadership and engagement are not directly addressed beyond faculty contributions through service and research but do not directly address how students are educated in these areas.
- They speak to the importance of the skills and modes of thinking that an education in literature and English foster, but do not demonstrate specifically how their program, as structure currently, prepares students for the 21st century workforce.

<td>Strengths:</td>
<td>In FY 17 English had 28.7 contract faculty for 240 majors and SCH of 7,803 and total general funds budget of 3.6 mil. The amount of money spent per major and credit hour is higher for English than all other departments this reader reviewed. That said, there is clearly a demand for general education courses, as an example all UM students are required to take ENG 101. Based on the SCH, reductions to the majors General Education offerings would negatively impact the institution.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Weaknesses:</td>
<td>The impact of reductions on other majors was not discussed, just the impact on general education. Further it was discuss that the time to degree for students across the university would be impacted by cuts to English as it would directly impact general education requirements. If funding was reduced it was not clear why English would have to make cuts to the General Ed areas, especially since it expressed as being the institutions greatest need.</td>

| Strengths: | - Strong contribution to General Education and non-majors across campus. They saw seeing an increase in numbers until resources to support sections declined.
- They are intrinsically linked to majors throughout humanities and sciences, and are creating unique collaborations with professional and research programs in other colleges.
- They have made reductions to the credit load in their majors and minors to encourage double-majors and minors. |
| Weaknesses: | - The link, vitality of other programs in the Department of English, especially the embedded BA options outside of General UG Literature could be better established. |

| Strengths: | - They have strong numbers of majors and degrees awarded.
- The number of minors are low and completion even lower but they have already taken action to remedy this and offer a good solution.
- Strong examples of community outreach. |
| Weaknesses: | - The research/creative scholarship numbers look impressive but are hard to measure.
- Would like to better understand the various options and their contribution to the undergraduate program. Do they consume distinct resources? |
4. QUALITY

Creative Writing Faculty are well published and award winning, publications such as The New Yorker, The Paris Review, and the New York Times Book Review were mentioned.

5. EFFICIENCY

Reviewer: 1
Score: 4
Weighted Score: 0.4

Strengths: The 5YA of SCH for all undergraduate courses per T/TT faculty FTE, is in the third quintile. The department employs 31 grad TA’s to teach courses- it was mentioned as a efficiency as those TA’s are paid so poorly. English has revised their curriculum and reduced credits for majors in an effort to make it easier for students to double major.

Weaknesses: The 5YA of SCH for all undergraduate courses per instructional FTE, is in the first quintile.

Reviewer: 2
Score: 3
Weighted Score: 0.3

Strengths: They are open to interdisciplinary interactions to fill gaps in the curriculum caused by faculty attrition. Faculty are creating opportunities to expand offerings for distance students.

Weaknesses: Low SCH to instructional faculty.
A great number of losses have taken place, and they speak to the breadth of the curriculum they need to deliver, but more specifics on content of that breadth needed to maintain the program would be value.
Would like to know more about the make-up of the instructional faculty versus the T/TT faculty. Why is that distribution of instructional personnel necessary?
Consider for Development and/or Modification

Creative Writing program has connections with the Media Arts program that could surely be expanded. The new Literature and the Environment program was stated to be especially promising and it was created at zero cost to the institution. If resources were provided it is stated that the program would flourish.

Weaknesses:
No metrics provided on how more resources would impact students, and provide significant opportunity.
