VIII. JUSTIFICATION

Provide enough information that someone without specialized knowledge can make an informed decision.

The University of Montana’s four-year and graduate business degree programs are offered by the School of Business Administration. The change in name is driven by two factors. First, “administration” is an antiquated term rooted in business disciplines initially relating to secretarial support and commerce training. Many business schools have abandoned the term as the curriculum and business practice have modernized and become more sophisticated over time. Second, many of the professional schools on campus moved to be “colleges” a number of years ago, yet the School of Business is one of the largest professional schools on campus. We periodically are asked why we are “only” a school, the perception being that it is less prestigious than a college. The change to a College will not impact the three existing academic departments or administrative structure.

Given that many of our competitors are colleges with names not referencing “administration,” the change in title will enhance our reputation. We hope this would help attract students, faculty, and donors to the College of Business at the University of Montana.
