2015 SUMMER SEMESTER

Courses with a Specific Gerontological Focus

*PSYX 233 Fundamentals of Psychology of Aging, 3 cr.
This online course offers an overview of theories and research findings in the psychology of adulthood and aging. There is an online learning fee of $144 for this course.
May 26 - June 26, 2015 (CRN 50314)

Courses with Some Gerontological Content

ANTY 426, Culture, Health and Healing, 3 cr.
Cross-cultural comparisons of theories and concepts and health and illness. Examination of the impact of these concepts upon health practices and treatment of disease around the world.
May 26 - June 26, 2015 (CRN 51096)

PSYX 280, Fundamentals of Memory and Cognition, 3 cr.
The acquisition and uses of knowledge. An examination of research and theories of human learning, memory, and thinking.
MTWR June 29 - July 31, 2015, 9:30am - 11:20am (CRN 50818)

PSYX 348, Psych of Family Violence, 3 cr.
Exploration of theoretical explanations for the presence of violence in American families; research and interventions in such areas as child physical and sexual abuse, battering of women, marital rape, spousal homicide, etc.
MTWR May 26 - June 26, 2015, 1:30pm - 3:20pm (CRN 50315)

SW 475 Loss, Grief and Bereavement, 3 cr.
Examination of death, dying and grief from an ecological perspective, focusing on the processes of dying and theories of grief. Emphasis on physical, social, psychological, spiritual, and cultural influences that surround death and grief. Consideration of cultural norms, attitudes toward death, medical, legal and ethical issues of dying. Focus on normal and complicated grief.
This course will be conducted through a blend of face-to-face (1/3) and online interaction (2/3).
Class meets Wednesdays, June 29 - July 31, 2015, 5:00pm - 8:00pm (CRN 50610)

INDEPENDENT STUDY
2015 SUMMER OR FALL SEMESTER

Students may work with advisors to develop 1-2 hours of independent study relative to topics in gerontology or other areas. Contact instructors in the following departments to explore the independent study option: Health Sciences, Human & Family Development, Pharmacy Practice, Physical Therapy, Psychology, Social Work, and Sociology.

The University of Montana Institute for Gerontology Education encourages the development of aging coursework, research, student involvement and community service.
For more information, contact Gayle Hudgins at 243-6495.

* Core course for Minor in Gerontology. Please turn over page for Fall 2015 courses.
GERONTOLOGY COURSES
2015 Fall Semester

Courses with Specific Gerontological Focus

AHHS 395 Geriatric Health Practicum, 1-3 cr.
Service learning experience in geriatrics in a setting compatible with the student’s major and interests. By arrangement. (CRN 73520)

AHHS 420 Geriatric Health Issues, 3 cr.
Prereq., Anatomy & physiology. A review of normal aspects of aging, common health problems associated with aging, and common pharmacological and non-pharmacological treatments of these problems in older persons. Completion of 44 hours is required for 3 credits. (CRN 74070)

*AHHS 430 Health Aspects of Aging, 3 cr. Online
An overview of the health aspects of aging including biological theories of aging, normal physiological changes, common pathological problems, cultural and ethnic differences in health of elders, health promotion and healthy aging, and the health care continuum of care for older persons. There is an online learning fee of $144 for this course. (CRN 74072)

*PSYX 233 Fundamentals of Psychology of Aging, 3 cr.
An overview of theories and research findings in the psychology of adulthood and aging. TR 2:10pm - 3:30pm (CRN 72208), online section (CRN 72291—There is an online learning fee of $144)

*SW 455 Social Gerontology, 3 cr.
Examination of the field of social gerontology, including an examination of the major bio/psycho/social/cultural/spiritual theories of aging, the service system, social and health issues, family and care giving dynamics, social policy, and end of life concerns. MW 11:10am - 12:30pm (CRN 72314)

Courses with Some Gerontological Content

ANTY 426 Culture, Health and Healing, 3 cr.
Cross-cultural comparisons of theories and concepts and health and illness. Examination of the impact of these concepts upon health practices and treatment of disease around the world. TR 9:40am - 11:00am (CRN 73280)

COMX 425 Communication in Health Organizations, 3 cr.
This online course explores the key issues at the intersection of health communication and organizational communication by considering communication processes that occur in a number of distinct contexts of health organizations. Through case studies and health campaigns students explore contemporary concerns and theory in the area of health communication. There is an online learning fee of $144 for this course. (CRN 75015)

PSYX 280 Fundamentals of Memory and Cognition, 3 cr.
The acquisition and uses of knowledge. An examination of research and theories of human learning, memory, and thinking. MWF 11:10am - 12:00pm (CRN 73465)

PSYX 348 Psych of Family Violence, 3 cr.
Exploration of theoretical explanations for the presence of violence in American families; research and interventions in such areas as child physical and sexual abuse, battering of women, marital rape, spousal homicide, etc. TR 8:10am - 9:30am (CRN 72469)

The University of Montana Institute for Gerontology Education encourages the development of aging coursework, research, student involvement and community service. For more information, contact Gayle Hudgins at 243-6495.

* Core course for Minor in Gerontology. Please turn over for Summer 2015 courses.