The program provides students with the opportunity to study Spanish and aspects of contemporary Mexico while living in Mexico. Students take three academic courses, live with Mexican families, and go on a number of field trips related to the themes of sustainable development and immigration. The program is in its 12th consecutive year. Pátzcuaro is a town with a population about the size of Missoula, located approximately 200 miles to the west of Mexico City. Pátzcuaro is known for its colonial architecture, large indigenous population and culture, and its natural beauty.
