Dear Friends and Colleagues,

Almost two years ago, we announced the resolution of the federal government’s investigation into sexual assault and harassment. Today, there’s another story to tell, related to our campus and the city of Missoula. Because of the hard work of many people, Montana and UM have made important and lasting changes.

From the moment I learned of a number of sexual assaults on our campus, my goals have been clear: 1) to care for the safety and healing of all people who find themselves involved in University grievance procedures involving discrimination, harassment, sexual misconduct, stalking and retaliation cannot and will not be

The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97.

As UM continues working on campus safety, we also are mindful of our obligations to protect students' privacy. With limited exceptions, information about students who find themselves involved in University grievance procedures involving discrimination, harassment, sexual misconduct, stalking and retaliation cannot and will not be shared with the public. Respecting students' privacy is important to the integrity of our grievance process and is in the best interests of all of our students.

As UM continues working on campus safety, we also are mindful of our obligations to protect students' privacy. With limited exceptions, information about students who find themselves involved in University grievance procedures involving discrimination, harassment, sexual misconduct, stalking and retaliation cannot and will not be shared with the public. Respecting students' privacy is important to the integrity of our grievance process and is in the best interests of all of our students.

UM's work has come at the same time that the issue of sexual assault on college campuses continues to grow in importance and visibility.

For much of the past year, the White House, Congress and state legislatures discussed the need to ensure that colleges and universities effectively address sexual violence involving students.

UM's work has come at the same time that the issue of sexual assault on college campuses continues to grow in importance and visibility.

For much of the past year, the White House, Congress and state legislatures discussed the need to ensure that colleges and universities effectively address sexual violence involving students.

The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97.

As UM continues working on campus safety, we also are mindful of our obligations to protect students' privacy. With limited exceptions, information about students who find themselves involved in University grievance procedures involving discrimination, harassment, sexual misconduct, stalking and retaliation cannot and will not be shared with the public. Respecting students' privacy is important to the integrity of our grievance process and is in the best interests of all of our students.

As UM continues working on campus safety, we also are mindful of our obligations to protect students' privacy. With limited exceptions, information about students who find themselves involved in University grievance procedures involving discrimination, harassment, sexual misconduct, stalking and retaliation cannot and will not be shared with the public. Respecting students' privacy is important to the integrity of our grievance process and is in the best interests of all of our students.

UM's work has come at the same time that the issue of sexual assault on college campuses continues to grow in importance and visibility.

For much of the past year, the White House, Congress and state legislatures discussed the need to ensure that colleges and universities effectively address sexual violence involving students.

UM's work has come at the same time that the issue of sexual assault on college campuses continues to grow in importance and visibility.

For much of the past year, the White House, Congress and state legislatures discussed the need to ensure that colleges and universities effectively address sexual violence involving students.

The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97. The number of institutions currently under federal investigation has grown to at least 97.