The University of Montana (UM) continues to monitor and assess guidelines from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the World Health Organization (WHO), as well as coordinate with Missoula City-County Health Department, the Montana Department of Public Health and Human Services, the Montana Office of the Commissioner of Higher Education, and federal health officials to proactively monitor and respond to novel coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) to protect the health and well-being of our campus community.

The University of Montana is taking action to prevent further spread of the virus and to protect the health and safety of our community. Actions being taken are in a proactive effort to safeguard the health and wellness of our students, faculty and staff, as well as the broader Missoula community.

The University of Montana will offer summer session courses. At this time, the majority of courses will be delivered via remote (including online) instructional methods. Beginning May 11, students enrolled in the 12-week summer session, first six-week summer session and first three-week summer session, as well as University sponsored non-credit camps/experiences that start in May will move to remote instruction.

The University of Montana leadership has made no decision to cancel instructional formats for sessions that start later in the summer. UM Communication will be published in the event that things change.

We encourage you to visit umt.edu/coronavirus to find updates from the University and answers to frequently asked questions regarding the Coronavirus.

Please do not hesitate to reach out to us at UMSummer@mso.umt.edu if you have any questions. We hope that everyone stays safe and healthy, and we continue to be here for you if you need anything.