III. Description and purpose of the course: General Education courses must be introductory and foundational. They must emphasize breadth, context, and connectedness, and relate course content to students' future. Visit <https://www.umt.edu/faculty/senate/ASCRC/GEDocuments/GE_Criteria_1-08.htm>

The main purpose of this course is to familiarize students with the basic categories of philosophy and practice in Buddhism, a Pan-Asian religious tradition of remarkable diversity and expansive geographical and chronological scope. While the course will always maintain an historical perspective, in order to provide us with a framework for understanding Buddhist developments in their cultural and temporal contexts, the course will be structured mainly along thematic lines, according to the traditional concepts of the “Three Jewels or Refuges”: Buddha (awakened being, exemplar, teacher); Dharma (teachings, doctrine); and Sangha (community), and the “Three Trainings”: Sila (ethics, morality, virtue); Samadhi (meditation, contemplation); and Prajna (wisdom, transformative insight). Following this structure, we will closely read primary sources (in translation) and secondary studies, in order to explore how Buddhists, from ancient to modern times, have viewed the world and lived their lives in the cultural settings of South and Southeast Asia (Theravada Buddhism), East Asia (Mahayana Buddhism), and the Tibetan and Himalayan regions of Asia (Tantric or Vajrayana Buddhism). Gaining such knowledge will prepare students well to be future “global citizens,” as they will have gained an in-depth understanding of one of the world’s most enduring and influential cultural traditions.

IV. Criteria: Briefly explain how this course meets the criteria for the group. See <http://www.umt.edu/faculty/senate/ASCRC/GEDocuments/GE_Criteria_1-08.htm>

Students will study Buddhism with an eye towards its major developments and their causes and consequences. All the materials covered in the class will be deeply contextualized with regard to the historical factors (political, social, and economic) that influenced and were influenced by these materials. As the course description indicates, a variety of methodological approaches will be taken, with perhaps the two main approaches being historiographical and close critical/analytical readings of texts.

<tr>
<td>As indicated above, we will: a) look at the major developments in Buddhist history with a special eye towards their causes and consequences; b) engage in close critical/analytical readings of major Buddhist “texts” (scriptures and art), always taking time to contextualize them in terms of influential political, social, and economic factors; and c) investigate not only Buddhist texts to gain understandings of what Buddhists believe, but also examine central Buddhist practices to ascertain how Buddhists behave or conduct themselves in the world.</td>
