

ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIELD SCHOOL IN PATAGONIA

ANTY 491 (undergraduates) and ANTY 595 (graduate students)

Department of Anthropology, The University of Montana

Winter Session, January 2-20, 2012

Professor: Dr. Anna Prentiss

Three UM Credits; No prior archaeological experience required

Join an international team of archaeologists and geoscientists. Participate in survey and excavation in the incredible Rio Ibanez Valley, Chilean Patagonia.

Tuition follows the state-support fee schedule, credits count toward Spring Semester total credit load, and students registering for more than 12 Spring credits pay no additional tuition. A course fee of $3,324 covers lodging, meals, insurance, in-country travel and some course materials costs. Students are also responsible for personal expenses and round trip airfare. The course is eligible for financial aid, including international travel costs.

For course information or to apply for the field school, contact Dr. Anna Prentiss, at 406-243-6152 or e-mail

anna.prentiss@umontana.edu. To apply, please submit letter of interest, unofficial transcript, résumé, and one letter of recommendation. Must have valid passport. Applications Due November 1, 2011.

Enrollment limited to Juniors, Seniors, and Graduate Students (International Programs Policy).
